Patrick Vardaro, who lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Vardaro of 12 Usher St., Woodmont, relives two earlier assassinations of presidents while reading a copy of Friday's Register reporting the fatal shooting of President John F. Kennedy. In front of young Patrick is a copy of The New York Herald of Sept., 1901, depicting the shooting of President McKinley. The headline reads, "Anarchist Shoots the President . . . Six of Clan Arrested in Chicago; Doctors are Hopeful." The third paper on the table is a copy of a poster printed by the federal government after the shooting of President Abraham Lincoln.
